Mohegan Park Skating Pond Finished

Now Being Flooded Preparatory For Cold Weather—

Washington Street Entrance to Park Will be Opened Soon.

Work has been completed on the cement corewall and dam for the skating pond in Mohegan park, on which Superintendent Duff has had men at work for the past few weeks. This will permit the flowing of several acres and provide a safe skating pond as it is not over five feet deep at its deepest point with the pond full. The ponding of the water is underway and it is possible that there will be a good sized body of water there by the time it is cold enough to make ice. The water is now about two and a half feet deep there.

This pond is only about half the distance to Mohegan lake is from Rockwell street but the use of the lake for skating will be restricted. That is showing quite a little gain from the recent rains.

The work on the road from a point near the pavilion to the road constructed from Washington street has been finished so that the opening up of the pond on Washington street can take place in a day or two. Superintendent Duff is now engaged in building a fence along the new road at the point where it crosses the old golf course. This is of wire and will soon be finished. The drive which will be afforded by the new entrance will be one of the attractive ones of the city in a few years. The foliage in the park is particularly beautiful at the present time.

By the completion of the Washington street entrance the board of park commissioners will have no trouble over the ownership of the land which was donated to the city. It was given with the understanding that the Washington street entrance should be completed by 1912 and the opening of the road now carries out the agreement two months ahead of time.
